

Adelaide Fringe review 2018: Apartment of the Feign

Josephine Lim, The Advertiser

Apartment of the Feign

Theatre / Performance

Rating: ★★★★★

Studio, Bakehouse Theatre

Until March 10

IMAGINARY friends are the best of friends, or are they not?

Bert lives in an apartment with three imaginary friends - a snobby but kind Englishman, a boisterous cowgirl and a mute, who closely resembles a mamma bear figure.

Yet the arrival of the newest 'real' friend changes the seemingly peaceful household.

An engaging plot with twists and turns shows well crafted directing talent.

Not to mention the great chemistry between the young cast members.

But the lead actor Brendon Catalano truly shines as the star of the show.

It's unexpected, heartwarming and well worth your time.

Adelaide Fringe review 2018: Apartment of the Feign

Josephine Lim, The Advertiser

Apartment of the Feign
Theatre / Performance
Studio, Bakehouse Theatre

Rating: ★★★★★

Until March 10

IMAGINARY friends are the best of friends, or are they not?

Bert lives in an apartment with three imaginary friends - a snobby but kind Englishman, a boisterous cowgirl and a mute, who closely resembles a mamma bear figure.

Yet the arrival of the newest 'real' friend changes the seemingly peaceful household.

An engaging plot with twists and turns shows well crafted directing talent.

Not to mention the great chemistry between the young cast members.

But the lead actor Brendon Catalano truly shines as the star of the show. It's unexpected, heartwarming and well worth your time.

